The Silver Squabble. The whole question in dispute about silver is ready of solution. The cupidity and Texas, $174,000. selfishness of men, added to the conceit of some, are at the bottom of the whole matter. Silver is a good and precious metal, entirely capable of subserving the purpose of a basis of paper credit. It is reliable and pure. Such reliability and purity are invaluable to society. . It has never failed to answer the expectations based upon it any more than gold itself has failed. It is important therefore that it should be employed to answer the purposes of man as far as it will go. The great want of man is a basis, a foundation for credit-a solid specie basis. Gold and silver are the proper basis. The association of silver with gold as the basis of credit expands the basis exactly to its just dimensions. This maintains the highest degree of human energy and enterprise, and silver is enabled to protect itself and shield itself from unfair and injurious combinations which might be wrought through unserupulous and adroit schemes that might be favored by any unphilosophical and unwise in-

The great trouble now is the inequality in the relative value of the gold and silver coins. Silver-men and gold-men are greedy. Each class wants to get the better of houses." If gold and silver coins were made relatively equal in value all would move as smoothly as gently-running water. ance of the relative value of these coins is not new, and has frequently occurred. let the ratio be established, and we shall in what lies cur particular hope of the future not be flustrated again soon. At this time were the silver and gold coins equalized in relative value we should hear not another word about it. The attempt to discredit silver is only made by inconsiderate and impractical persons, stimulated by the gold rings. Equalize the go ten.

Mr. Eaton's Speech.

We are constantly misled by the false respondents of the Republican papers in New York, concerning speeches made in Congress by Democratic statesmen. The last instance was their description of the scene in the Senate when Mr. Earon, of Connec- ed at last General Assembly, made a report ticut, made his last speech. It was represented that Mr. EATON had been terribly worsted. We have just read the speech, him on the one side and BLAINE, CONKLING, DAWES, PLATT, and others on the other side, and we can confidently declare encounter of wits. Mr. Eaton is a Demoerat of Democrats-one of the ante-bellum type-a Connecticut RAN. TUCKER. He maintained his ground throughout in the debate we are aliuding to. Never an inch did be yield. He quoted DANIEL WEBSTER, HARRISON, JOHN TYLER, and various other until Thursday afternoon. statesmen, to prove that they had some of them called the Constitution a "compact," and others of them the union of the States a "confederacy."
